

ABSTRACT

A light emitting device has an n-type layer and a p-type layer, which cooperate with one another to form a light generating region. At least one n⁺ layer is formed upon either the n-type layer or the p-type layer. At least one current spreading layer is formed upon the n⁺ layer.